SuCESS

Developing and improving the higher education offer in criminology and public safety in South American countries.

The SuCESS project is a collaboration between European and South-American universities for the exchange of experiences, knowledge transfer and curricula improvement in the areas of criminology and public safety.

Main objectives:

- ▣ Identify the state-of-the-art and needs of teachers and researchers of criminology and related fields in South American universities;
- ▣ Update and develop new educational curricula and resources addressing the needs identified;
- ▣ Create a Interuniversity Cooperation Network and a thematic workshop programme to foster cooperation for knowledge transfer and capacity building between teachers and researchers of South America and Europe
- ▣ Increase the quality and quantity of human capital devoted to knowledge and action in criminology and public security including: teachers, students, researchers, professionals and dealing with citizen security and crime prevention, government and justice officers.

Euro-South American Interuniversity Cooperation network on criminology and public security teaching

SuCESS will create a network for professional training and management of criminological knowledge applied to public policies. This network will be hosted in an online repository that will include research and teaching resources as well as e-collaboration tools to support the development of the Network.

SuCESS will develop and improve training programmes (undergraduate, graduate and postgraduate levels) based in the latest research evidences and good practices

Focus on:

- ▣ multidisciplinary approaches
- ▣ preventive measures
- ▣ bridging research and social policies
